Troy Robertson, a third-generation Texan, began his career in oil and gas. He studied business at Texas Tech University, and went on to spend ten years in finance for the energy industry.

It was during his career in finance that he developed a desire to create a business of his own along with a keen appreciation for whiskey. He began sampling various styles of the spirit and, over time, several micro-distilleries crossed his path, igniting his excitement to build a distillery of his own.

Robertson eventually learned that his friend, Leonard Firestone, shared the same vision of opening a Fort Worth distillery and crafting a uniquely Texas expression of classic whiskies. After careful studying and perseverance, Firestone & Robertson Distilling Co. opened its doors in Fort Worth.

Robertson is passionate about supporting the city of Fort Worth and staying involved in the community. He is a proud sponsor of the Fort Worth Stock Show Syndicate and was Committee Spirits Chair of the 2014 Fort Worth Food and Wine Festival. Additionally, Robertson sponsors organizations and events such as Cooks Children Hospital, Van Cliburn Foundation, Junior League of Fort Worth, The Henry House Foundation and the Dean & Deluca Invitational at The Colonial Country Club.
